

How to dress for the 2011 Denver Zombie Crawl

Funstuff.net

Larry Berreth
Longmont Zombie Examiner

October 15, 2011

No plans for next weekend? Should you go to the 6th Annual Denver Zombie Crawl? But what should I wear, you may ask?

Yes. Yes. Read on.

Next Saturday, October 22, the 6th Annual Denver Zombie Crawl takes place at Skyline Park.

Sure, there will be people who have spent time and imagination creating enviable performance art of visual zombie delight, but you can join right in with the fun.

You can really wear anything--it doesn't have to be ripped and bloodied--but let your imagination run wild.

Regular clothes are fine, but you'll earn more street cred for something special or with a theme. Old Halloween costumes or work uniforms can be "mashed up" to become zombie cheerleaders, housewives (with undead offspring in tow) football players, firefighters, and even zombie Starbucks baristas.

You can purchase inexpensive Halloween makeup at specialty shops like Spirit, or even the grocery store, to create a deathly white pallor, but a quick Google Images search will reveal many zombies are still flesh toned but bloodied. A quick red makeup pencil can simulate blood dripping from around the mouth and chin, which is the quickest and most popular look.

No matter how, or like what, you dress, be sure to bring a canned non-perishable food donation for the Food Bank of the Rockies.

If you're still on the fence about coming, remember, you may even meet a cute zombie worth dying for.

For more information, see the official website or their Facebook page.